

Challenges for Japan in the 21st Century

The Shibusawa Ei'ichi Memorial Foundation, the University of Missouri St. Louis, and the Asian Institute, University of Toronto, with the University of Toronto Press

Editorial board:

Akira Iriye (editor)
Frederick Dickinson
Michael Donnelly
Joel Glassman
Masato Kimura
Izumi Koide
Gil Latz
Michael Schneider
Patricia G. Steinhoff
David A. Welch
Patricia Wetzel

The Challenges for Japan in the 21st Century book series provides an opportunity for Japanese and non-Japanese scholars alike to examine the major challenges facing contemporary Japan from a variety of perspectives. Disciplinarily and methodologically eclectic, it welcomes multidisciplinary work as well as work that falls within the ambit of a single field, and it welcomes both contemporary topics and historical topics. The series aims to publish its first volumes in 2007-2008 and is actively interested in proposals on topics such as the following:

- Japanese competitiveness in a globalizing era
- Will the Japanese economy boom again?
- The demographic challenge to Japan
- Japan and multiculturalism
- Indigenous peoples in Japan
- Women and politics in Japan
- Language and politics in Japan
- Japan's democratic deficit in comparative perspective
- History, memory, and Japanese foreign relations
- Japan's security options in the twenty-first century
- Japan and the challenge of China
- Japan and Korea
- The future of the U.S.-Japanese security relationship
- Popular culture and Japanese 'soft power'
- Japanese immigration: political and ethical dimensions
- Accountability and responsibility in Japanese public policy

- Work and the family in Japan: social and ethical issues

For further information or to submit a proposal, please contact:

David A. Welch
Managing Editor
15 King's College Circle
Toronto ON M5S 3H7 CANADA
Tel. 416-978-4486
Fax 510-544-7809
david.welch@utoronto.ca